Research profile

The vast majority of my research publications are tied to thin films and surfaces.

1. I have initiated in Iasi the investigation of thin ferromagnetic films of FeAl (including the novel synthesis approach - plasma-assisted magnetron sputtering); it was subsequently documented for the synthesis of certain metal and/or compound films. My early publications tackled the subjects of plasma-surface interaction, as reflected in thin film growth and functional properties.

2. I have initiated the research in the field of Surface and interface physics at the Alexandru Ioan Cuza University of Iasi in 1996. Initially, the investigations were carried out in co-operation with the surface scientists from the Eindhoven University of Technology in the frame of COPERNICUS European Union-funded research project. Starting 2008, the investigations were relocated in Iasi in the newly founded Laboratory of surface/interface physics, on the basis of newly acquired modern equipment, as follows:

- a. XPS and Auger spectrometers – started operating in June 2018 – purchased with financial support from the World Bank (see Contracts list)
- b. PVD-assisted synthesis facility for thin film preparation (operated in DC, RF and pulsed-DC).
- c. Ellipsometric instrument for optical characterization
- d. Contact angle and surface energy characterization equipment
- e. Anodization equipment for the synthesis and modification of oxide nanotubes.

The Lab inventory was gradually completed with equipment and components acquired in the frame of research projects earned through national and international projects. The lab facilities have been using until the present time, with a significant contribution to the formation of numerous PhD students and post-doctoral researchers of the Faculties of Physics, Chemistry and Biology of Alexandru Ioan Cuza University, via free and unlimited access. Conditions were also created so far to conduct high-quality research within bilateral research with foreign universities (Shizuoka University - Japan, Gomel State University-Belarus, Moldova State University, Innsbruck University-Austria). Research in the field of Solid surfaces and interfaces was also carried out with Romanian Higher Education entities and research institutions (National Institute for Research and Development in Technical Physics, Iasi, Petru Poni Research Institute, Iasi, National Institute for Research and Development in Materials Physics, Bucharest-Magurele, Technical University of Iasi etc.

Research directions:

1. Physics of low-dimensional materials (thin films, nanotubes/nanorods, nanoparticles).
2. Basic and applied research on the physico-chemical phenomena at the plasma-solid interfaces.
